Spring, 2014

Dear Consumer:

In conjunction with the specialists at the Penn State Cooperative Extension and members of Bucks County’s farming community, we are pleased to provide you with the 2014 edition of “Fresh from Bucks County Farms.”

We work closely with the Cooperative Extension to acquaint you with our county farm stands and vineyards and the diversity of products they produce each year. This 2014 directory is an excellent resource to locate and purchase fruits, vegetables, wine, flowers and other agricultural products fresh from the farm.

Farming has played a historically significant role in the Bucks County economy and lifestyle since our founding in 1682. Buying local not only supports your neighborhood businesses and communities but it also helps preserve the lifestyle and culture for which Bucks County is renowned. It is also important to safeguard our agricultural communities and natural areas for future generations. To date, nearly 165 farms have received agricultural conservation easements since Bucks County’s Agricultural Land Preservation Program began in 1989 and the county continues to its efforts to protect open space with over 8,860 acres under preservation.

We encourage you to visit a working farm, road stand, farmers market or vineyard and bring home the fresh goods that have been cultivated by our immensely hard-working agricultural community. You will surely delight in this unique experience.

Sincerely,
 Robert G. Loughery Charles H. Martin Diane M. Ellis-Marseglia, LCSW

FARM FRESH FOOD LOVERS,

You have to be an optimist to farm. Each growing season brings special, unpredictable challenges. But those who stay in the farming business roll with the punches and keep going. Fruit growers spent some miserable late-winter days pruning fruit trees in the snow, ice, slush and mud this year already. And the inevitable droughts, insect plagues and disease epidemics that come each year are on the horizon. Farming is not for the faint of heart!

The growing season begins earlier than you might think. The sweet ‘Candy’ onion that you’ll enjoy in mid-summer was born on a late January day in a local greenhouse, spent its youth as a transplant and probably even got a haircut before the last snow melted. Tomatoes, pepper and eggplant were seeded in March. Some Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) operations started providing weekly “shares” in March.

All of this hard work pays off this summer as the fruits of farm labor come in. The peaches ripen, the tomatoes are plentiful (and actually taste like a tomato), fragrant cantaloupes and other melons will be part of almost every breakfast meal because they’re so abundant. Maybe you’ll drizzle some just-harvested, local honey on your cereal, too.

I don’t know about you but one thing that makes the short, cold, days of winter more bearable is the thought of the bounty of locally grown food that summer is sure to bring. I hope you find a new farm, a new market or a new, locally grown product this year ... fresh from a Bucks County farm.

Sincerely,

Scott Guiser,
 Sr. Extension Educator, Penn State Extension

ABOUT EXTENSION—EXTENSION.PSU.EDU

All universities engage in research and teaching, but the nation's more than 100 land-grant colleges and universities have a third critical mission—extension. “Extension” means “reaching out,” and, along with teaching and research, land-grant institutions such as Penn State “extend” their resources, solving public needs with college or university resources through non-formal, non-credit programs. These programs are administered through county and regional extension offices, which bring land-grant expertise to the most local of levels. Penn State Cooperative Extension’s mission is to enhance quality of life by providing informal outreach educational opportunities to individuals, families, businesses, and communities throughout the Commonwealth.

We teach people how to solve problems, do something better, live healthier, manage resources wisely, and create a sustainable future. We are dedicated to giving you the means to grow, to achieve, to compete, to go farther, and to do more. Contact us and see what Extension can do for you!

MANOFF MARKET GARDENS

Thirty years ago Amy and Gary Manoff began growing fruit in Solebury. Today, their farm offers more than 25 apple varieties and is famous for tree ripened peaches and nectarines. Strawberries, raspberries, blackberries and cherries are other fruit delicacies produced on their beautiful Bucks County farm. Cut flowers, pumpkins and a few other season crops round-out their product line. The small amount of fruit that is not sold fresh finds its way into jams, sauces and preserves that are sold year-round. Gift baskets featuring samples of the farm's produce are available.

The Manoffs are keenly focused on fruit quality. This means meticulous care during the growing season and allowing fruit to develop to peak maturity and flavor. Since all of the fruit is sold directly to consumers, it is allowed to reach perfection before picking. You cannot find this kind of fruit quality in the grocery store.

COMMUNITY SUPPORTED AGRICULTURE (CSA)

Share the harvest! That's one of the ideas behind community supported agriculture. It's certainly different than shopping at a market each week. Instead, you go with the flow of the season, enjoying what your farmer/partner is harvesting. Never had a rutabaga before? You might be surprised that you love them! In addition, CSA members often have opportunities or obligations to get involved in the farming aspect of their weekly share. And, you put your money upfront, investing your good faith in the farmer you're supporting. Sound like fun? The season has already started but opportunities are still available for 2014 at some CSA's. Check out the CSA listings below.

COMMUNITY FARM MARKETS... JOIN THE FUN!

Finding locally grown unique foods is a fine way to spend a Saturday morning or Friday evening or... whenever community farmers markets are in operation. Bucks County has a farmers' market in operation five days of the week, in season. These are places where many farmers gather at a set time each week. Each market has a unique set of vendors but every market offers an interesting variety of locally grown fruits, vegetables, baked goods, eggs and seasonal specialties. This directory lists seven community markets in Bucks County, from Ottsville to Langhorne, and they are all worth visiting.

FARM MARKET NUTRITION PROGRAM (FMNP)

Purpose

The Farm Market Nutrition Program (FMNP) (WIC) provides resources in the form of fresh, nutritious, unprepared, locally grown fruits, vegetables, and herbs from farm markets in Pennsylvania. The purpose of FMNP is to provide fresh, unprepared, locally grown fruits and vegetables to WIC recipients, and to expand the awareness, use of and sales at farm markets.

Who Should Participate

The PA Department of Agriculture is responsible for authorizing individual farmers, farmers' markets, or both. Only farmers and/or farmers' markets authorized by the state agency may accept and redeem FMNP coupons. Individuals, who exclusively sell produce grown by someone else, such as wholesale distributors, cannot be authorized to participate in the FMNP.

WIC eligibility is determined by the local WIC Agency. It would include women that are pregnant, breastfeeding, postpartum and children ages two through five that qualify for the regular WIC program. Low-income seniors are the targeted recipients of the Senior Farm Market Nutrition Program (SFMNP) benefits.

How The Program Works

FMNP checks are distributed through the Area Agency on Aging (for seniors) and the WIC Agency (for WIC recipients). FMNP recipients are given a list of participating farmers and farmers' markets when they receive their checks. These checks are redeemed for fresh fruits and vegetables grown in Pennsylvania.

WHAT IS "ORGANIC"

Organic means different things to each of us—consumers and farmers. Most would agree that it means grown without synthetic fertilizers and pesticides. In agricultural production, the word organic gained greater significance when the United States Department of Agriculture defined the term and began to regulate just what could and could not be called organic. To use this term, growers must certify that they are following established guidelines.

For many small scale growers, the hassle of certification is just not worth the effort. Or perhaps some small part of their operation does not meet the standards established for USDA certification. Some of these growers may adopt another designation such as Certified Naturally Grown.

What's a consumer to do? Talk to the folks where you buy your farm fresh food. Find out what their farming philosophy is all about. You might be surprised to find that the official organic designation, while useful in some settings such as the supermarket, is less meaningful than the conversation you have with the person who grew those tomatoes you are about to buy.

One of the beauties of buying from a local food producer is that you can look them in the eye; you can literally walk in the field where your food was produced; you can get to know the person who grew your food.

For many folks, local trumps organic. But that does not need to be the end of the conversation. Talk to your farm friends. Find out what they do and why they do it. Tell them what you think. Visit their farms and get a broad view how your food is produced. Then return to the word organic and see if it fits.

YOUR GARDEN QUESTIONS ANSWERED HERE!

Did your beets bite the dust?
Are grubs eating your lawn?
Bagworms got you down?

Call us, at 215-345-3283 or visit us at Neshaminy Manor Center, Doylestown with your gardening questions, week days from 9:00AM till 12:00PM.

Penn State Extension has answers to almost every gardening question. Backed by research-based knowledge, we can help you establish a new lawn, diagnose tree and shrub problems, identify household pests and even teach you how to grow fruits and vegetables in your own back yard.

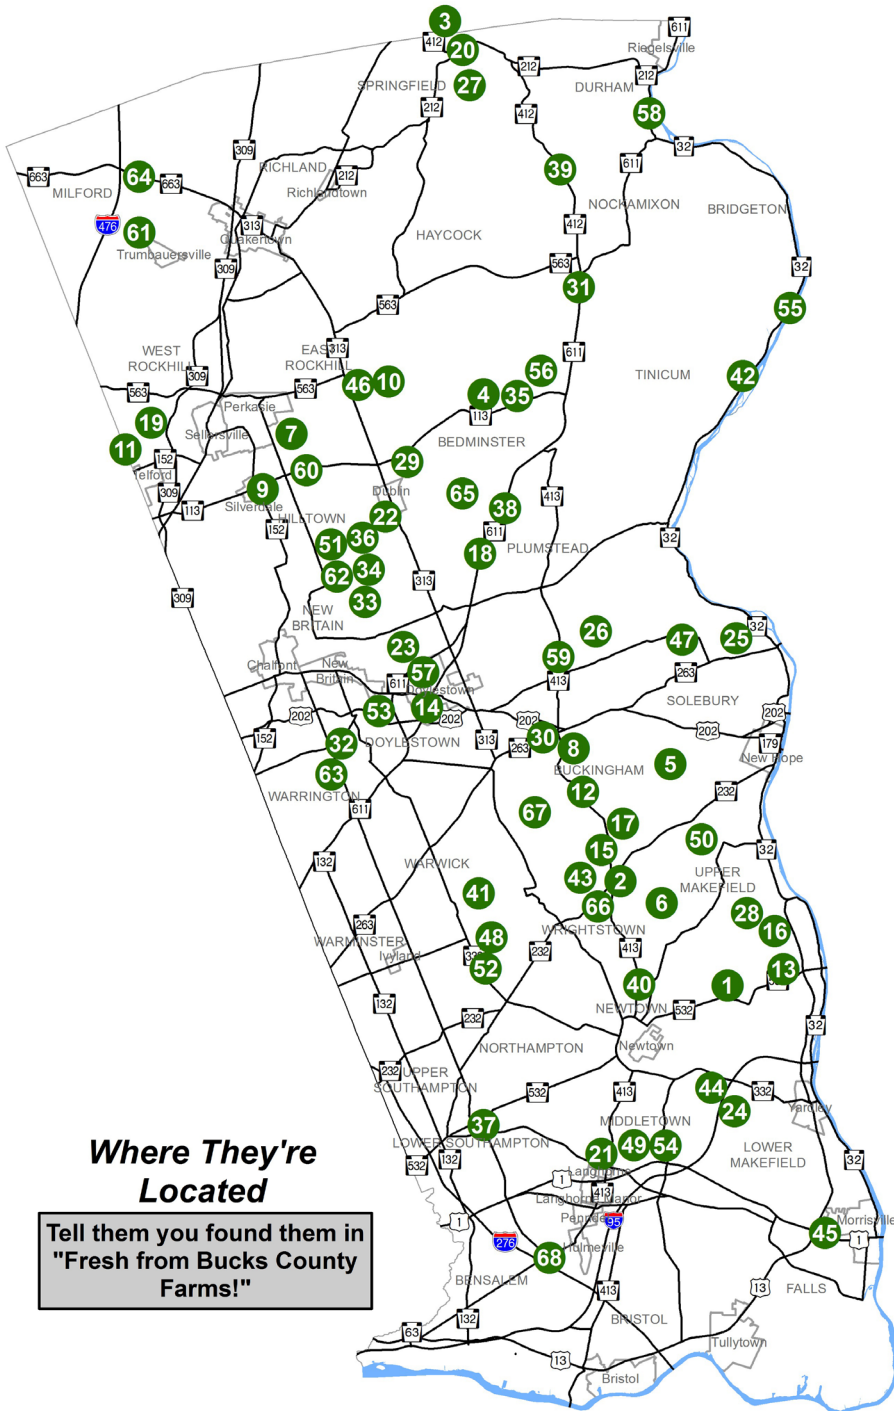

Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences produces thousands of publications that help gardeners succeed. From asparagus to zucchini we've got current information on vegetable gardening. Ants, termites, and other destructive pests can cause serious household damage....and we can help diagnose and prescribe treatment for these problems. Landscape problems? Give us a call. We have information on pruning, pest management and other aspects of landscape care.

Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences is also on the web. You can search this site for publications and frequently asked garden questions at: extension.psu.edu/plants/gardening
